Be assured this proposal will have most considered attention.

Dear ...:

This will acknowledge your recent communication with respect to the immigration bill which has already passed the House and Senate and which will return to the Senate floor at a very early date in the form of a Conference Report.

Since the Conference Committee must stay within the language of the two bills as passed, no additional amendments can be added at this time.

I am grateful for your comments.

Sincerely,

Everett McKinley Dirksen

Dear:

The President's veto of the McCarren-Walter Bill was overridden by both House and Senate, and I voted to override on the ground that the veto message did not make out a persuasive case for a support of the veto.

To be sure, there appear to be some provisions in the bill which may require subsequent remedy but it did contain many provisions which were long overdue.

Incidentally, the staff of the Senate Judiciary Committee worked in sustained fashion for nearly three years to revise the crazy-quilt of statutes relating to immigration, naturalization and deportation and put them in better form.

I am confident that if and when hardships, discriminations and other inequities develop that the Congress will give ready and sympathetic consideration to these problems.

Sincerely,

Everett McKinley Dirksen
