

Everett McKinley Dirksen
Illinois

United States Senate
Minority Leader

I assume you have this form, but am sending another just in case.

Dear

Justices of the Supreme Court are constitutional offices and can be removed only by impeachment. The impeachment process, under the Constitution, requires that articles of impeachment be filed and voted by the House of Representatives. If and when this is done, the Senate sits as a trial court and the House, through a board of managers, presents the case to the Senate. This means that any impeachment proceedings would have to originate in the House and members of the Senate would be expected to make no preliminary comment on the matter since each individual member of the Senate sits as a judge.

Sincerely,
