Dear ...:

In response to your correspondence urging support of Senate 1789, which deals with the authority of the Interstate Commerce Committee to bring about an adequate distribution of freight cars, I shall be glad to give this measure sympathetic attention.

Let me point out that the real difficulty at the moment appears to be a very sharp difference of opinion between the eastern and western railroads on this measure, and I presume there will be a spirited discussion of the whole matter if and when it is called up for action.

Sincerely,

Everett McKinley Dirksen
